

At the Chair of Entrepreneurial Finance and Corporate Finance (Prof. Dr. Axel Buchner) at ESCP Business School, Campus Berlin one position is available immediately, latest to be filled by September 2024:

Student Assistant (m/f/d)

10 hours per week (3 months contract with possible extension)

We conduct both empirical and theoretical research in the areas of entrepreneurial finance, venture capital, private equity, and corporate finance. Our research philosophy is that empirical research should be guided by rigorous economic theory and theoretical research should be inspired by and help to explain empirical facts. The research of the chair has been published in leading academic journals. Current research topics include: What is the risk and return of private equity investments? How can investors include private equity in a multi-asset class portfolio? What drives private-equity performance persistence? Private Equity debt funds: who wins and who loses?

We are looking for self-motivated, highly active and productive students, who are eager to gain first experience in research at one of the leading European business schools as well as support the chair in administrative topics.

Tasks

- Support in research projects and publications
- Participation in the execution and analysis of data collection
- Assistance in preparing teaching events
- Internet research as well as research in online databases
- Procurement of literature from libraries and online databases
- Ad-hoc administrative support

Requirements

- Students (Bachelor or Master) preferably with an academic focus on economics
- Proficient in MS Office, particularly Word, Excel, and PowerPoint (MATLAB or Python a plus)
- Experience in internet and literature research
- Excellent verbal and written skills in English, German skills desired but not required
- Reliability, self-initiative, sense of responsibility, commitment, and attention to detail
