

The Department of Economics (Dr. Kai Barron) at ESCP Business School, Campus Berlin has a vacancy for a position starting on September 1st, 2026:

Post-Doc (m/f/d) in Economics

Full-time | initially limited until 31 August 2028

About us:

The research at our chair encompasses a range of topics and methods in behavioral, experimental, and applied economics, including questions related to beliefs, economic disparities, narratives, moral decision-making, and childhood development. We are looking for someone interested in collaborating with us on a variety of exciting projects. This position is ideal for candidates in Behavioral Economics or Applied Micro. We offer mentorship, opportunities for co-authorship, and competitive pay and benefits.

Areas of responsibility:

The position offers substantial time for independent research, with opportunities for collaboration within the economics community in Berlin and across ESCP's European campuses. You will be part of the Managerial Economics group, actively involved in research, teaching, and the activities of the group, and you will have the opportunity to participate in international conferences and workshops.

We are looking for:

- Completed, or almost completed, a PhD in economics or a closely related field
- Pro-active, reliable, and excellent communication skills in English

What you can expect:

- Postdoctoral position at a world-leading business school, offering an exceptional research infrastructure
- A great team dedicated to fostering an environment where each member can grow to their fullest potential
- Opportunities for collaboration within the group at the chair and integration into the wider, vibrant economics community in Berlin, as well as with colleagues across ESCP's European locations in London, Madrid, Paris, Torino, and Warsaw

Are you interested? Then send us your detailed application (motivation letter, CV, research and teaching statement, and three reference letters in one PDF) via our application form until 31.01.2026 to:
